

Beegu

Beegu was not supposed to be here. She was lost. Her rocket had crashed on Earth and no-one seemed to understand her. From far away she thought she heard her mother calling but it wasn't her.

First she went to the city. She could hear the beeping of car horns and the rumbling of traffic all around her. Above her bright lights shone from street lamps and buildings stood as tall as mountains. She didn't like it there.

Then she thought she'd found the perfect place. Happy children were running around like wild animals. The sound of laughter was carried across the air until a loud whistle blew and a huge shadow appeared on the playground.

So she ran, and she ran and she ran. Once again, from far away she thought she heard her mother calling. This time it was her mother. Beegu was so happy to have found her mother again and return home.
